1. The power station at Stechovice is situated about 400 meters from the town. It has two halls, A and B. Hall A has low-pressure turbines for a large quantity of water; hall B has high-pressure turbines working with small quantities of water. Upstream, an artificial lake has been built on the right-hand side of the power station. The lake is a concrete square about 200 meters high and 300 x 300 meters in diameter; it has a capacity of one million cubic meters.
2. Surplus electric power is used at night for pumping up the river water into the lake. During the morning peak period, this water is used in hall B for additional production. Hall B is almost underground, so that the turbine outlets are on the river level behind the dam.
3. The whole power station is operated by remote control from one room by two technicians. This room is on the first floor overlooking hall A. Next to hall A are the pump rooms. The capacity of the power station is not known. The entire building is built of reinforced concrete.
